Six Appeal

The Course VI Student Group

Do you want to:

• Use the power of FREE FOOD to have your fellow Course VI'ers at your mercy
• Become famous by having your name on hundreds of flyers publicizing major department student activities
• Meet professors (e.g. head of the department) on more non-academic occasions
• Interact with the corporate world

Then consider joining Six Appeal, an undergraduate organization similar to IEEE, the professional EECS society. Help run social, academic, and professional events. The format of Six Appeal is very casual: you basically do what you want at your convenience. Speak with one of the current active members (listed below) to learn how to join. No fees, no prerequisites (although it helps to be in Course VI). Whether you are interested in becoming an officer or just presenting suggestions on what the department needs to do, please speak with us.

For more details on the current structure and activity of Six Appeal, refer to the table on the reverse side of this sheet.

We look forward to meeting you.

Six Appeal

The Course VI Student Group

Six Appeal is similar to an IEEE school chapter in that it establishes links among students, professors, and industry in ways that enhance the students' experience in Course VI. Six Appeal activities are both social and professional. Many students participate by attending weekly socials in the Chu Lounge (38-201). On any day of the week, students may use this lounge for eating, studying, or taking a break.

A growing number of projects conducted by Six Appeal strives to increase professional and academic awareness among students. The Annual Sophomore Welcome Buffet is the first broad exposure students have to Course VI professors and administrators. The Interviewing Seminar and Résumé Book help students pursue temporary and permanent careers in the EECS industry.

Six Appeal is sponsored by the EECS department, which provides all funding. Active members work with the Course VI Undergraduate Office. Run by Anne Hunter and Prof. L. A. Gould, this office makes suggestions and helps obtain the necessary resources for Six Appeal activities.

On the reverse side of this sheet is a table summarizing the duties and structure of the Six Appeal organization. Officers are generally appointed near the end of spring term. Anybody interested in participating should contact one of the following people. Meetings will be scheduled depending on preferences of members who would like to attend.

We look forward to meeting you.
