MIT's Student Information Processing Board

- Step One: Get involved in SIPB.
- Step Two: Play with computers, help the MIT community.
- Step Three: World Domination.

SIPB (pronounced sip-bee) is MIT's volunteer student group dedicated to computing. We pick up where the official MIT computing infrastructure leaves off. We provide a wide range of services such as answering questions, teaching classes, and maintaining software. We also hang around, hack on our own projects, and learn things. We are always looking for more people to help. To find out more, check out <http://www.mit.edu/sipb/>

If you have any questions about SIPB, Athena, or computers in general, stop by our office (W20-557, right by the Student Center Athena cluster), give us a call (x3-7788) or send us email (sipb@mit.edu).
