
The Cat Club

“Of all God’s creatures, there is only one that cannot be made slave of the leash. That one is the cat. If man could be crossed with the cat it would improve the man, but it would deteriorate the cat.”

– Mark Twain

Ah, the cat. Truly the ideal representative of the mad scientist. Their raw feline cunning, as they sit there, no doubt plotting our demise and awaiting the day cats shall rise as the supreme rulers of the world. The patience with which they sit there stalking their prey, waiting for hours for the moment to strike and destroy. The sheer glee they derive from drawing out the final moments of their victims’ lives, delighting in their terror and helplessness. And their nine lives, so reminiscent of the ingenious ways mad scientists find ways to cheat death and escape to try their mad schemes once again.

Unfortunately, some people in Sciencetown don’t quite seem to share your opinions. They call your cats a danger, out of control, a menace. Just because of the occasional accident, the occasional cat tripping the doomsday machine in some lab somewhere, peeing in someone important’s car, or some other totally minor incident like that, they are out for your beloved feline companions’ blood.

As a result of a few totally inconsequential accidents, current Sciencetown regulations require all feline companions be physically in their owners’ possession whenever they are out in public. They won’t even let them follow you around as long as they stay near you – you need to physically carry your cat everywhere. This is truly a mortal insult to both your integrity – surely you can be trusted to vouch for your cats! – and to the honor of your most noble pets. In response to this grave offense, you’ve formed The Cat Club, an organization of concerned cat-loving Mad Scientists. Your agenda is to get a resolution passed repealing the ban on feline autonomy, and declaring the cat to be the official mascot of Sciencetown. The most practical way to do this should be to draft a petition and get signatures of 2/3 of all the citizens of Sciencetown.

Unfortunately, the group is already off to a rocky start. While you’re each utterly confident in the maturity and readiness of your own cat for full membership in the Sciencetown society, there have been some... unfortunate incidents between several members of The Cat Club, so that some of you are not entirely on friendly terms with some of the others. Until these issues are resolved individually, it will likely be very difficult to make progress towards the petition.

Goals

- Patch up relations between the group’s various members.
- Draft the petition to grant greater rights to cats in Sciencetown.
- Get the Sciencetown government to pass your petition for greater feline rights.

Members

- Dr. Claw (Daniel Kane): Owner of MAD Cat
- Dr. Evil (Shawn Westerdale): Owner of Mr. Bigglesworth
- Blofeld (Daniel Grazian): Owner of ØetøSeptopussy.

Residents of Sciencetown

“A neighborhood is where, when you go out of it, you get beat up.”

—Murray Kempton

Residents of Sciencetown

Members

- Dr. Clayton Forrester (Charles Hope): The Mayor of Sciencetown. His term expires today, and hopefully today's election will be less controversial than the one in which he was elected. Dr. Strangelove had been leading in preliminary polls, whereupon Forrester launched all of his supporters into space (specifically, to the Satellite of Love). The vote was a landslide.
- Dr. Horrible (Ben Kaduk): The Official Blogger of Sciencetown. He is the major news source of the town, writing and singing about whatever strikes his fancy, and (for some reason or another) he has quite a bit of sway over popular opinion.
- Lecter (Daniel Whalen): Sciencetown's staff psychiatrist. Has an impersonal and somewhat off-putting bedside manner but he seems to get the job done.
- Dr. Mario (Catherine Olsson): A doctor of biology specializing in viral pharmacology. He arrived in Sciencetown about a week ago, fleeing the spreading drone epidemic. Seems to have an unhealthy attachment to a woman named "Peach".
- Jekyll (Alex Kandell): A doctor of chemistry with some violent mood swings. He was extradited to Sciencetown by the British government several years back after one of his rages destroyed the Tower of London, and has subsequently claimed to have cured the condition that was causing the problems.
- Dexter (Nikolas Koutsopoulos): A young (and rather diminutive) man of German descent who showed up about a year ago after his sister destroyed his lab for the Nth time. He seems to be interested in acoustics.
- Dr. Doom (JB Parkes): The sovereign ruler and absolute dictator of Latveria, an Eastern European nation. . . up until a week ago when Latveria ceased to exist thanks to the drone epidemic. Since his arrival here he has developed signs of multiple personality disorder stemming from the loss of his homeland.
- Dr. Evil (Shawn Westerdale): The archnemesis of Austin Powers, he was sent to Sciencetown five years ago after his last scheme involving lasers backfired so badly that the British government was forced to take action. He has since turned inwards and focused more of his time and energy towards his cat, Mr. Bigglesworth.
- Blofeld (Daniel Grazian): The head of the now-defunct criminal organization SPECTRE, he is an arrogant genius who was exiled to Sciencetown by MI6 years ago. Ever since, he has become even more twisted and cold, and focuses on getting revenge on James Bond almost to the point of obsession.
- Egon Spengler (Mike Salvato): A former Ghostbuster from New York City, he arrived in Sciencetown a couple of years ago. Over the years, he became even more withdrawn and introverted than he had been in his Ghostbusting days, to the point where nowadays he is a walking bag of neuroses. Dr. Hannibal Lecter has been working with him for a while now, and thinks he is close to a breakthrough.
- Dr. Frankenstein (Paul Kominers): A doctor of medicine who has pioneered numerous advances in lightning-based revivification. Claims to have caused the drone epidemic as a prelude to taking over the world.
- Dr. Claw (Daniel Kane): Leader of the now-defunct MAD crime syndicate, and archnemesis of Inspector Gadget. It is said that no one has seen his face and lived to tell the tale, though it's unclear who would be telling those tales.
- Luthor (Samantha Powers): A cutthroat businessman and scientist, Luthor served as head of LexCorp in Metropolis. He arrived here several days ago when fleeing from the drone epidemic, and promptly paid Dr. Clayton Forrester one billion dollars for one quarter of Sciencetown (since renamed Luthorville).
- Bill Nye the Science Guy (Alexandra Westbrook): A longtime resident of Sciencetown who's been living in town since his show went off the air years ago. A great educator and musician.

- Dr. T (Greg Lohman): A large black man, formerly of the A-Team TV series. He left his acting career to enroll in a PhD program and received a Doctorate in Science, and since then has been living in Sciencetown and pitying fools.

The Sciencetown Fair

Today is the 36th Annual Sciencetown Fair, coinciding exactly with the yearly mayoral elections. The schedule of events for the day is as follows:

- T+1:15 – Storytime with Uncle Lecter
- T+2:15 – Debates and Mayoral Election
- T+3:15 – The Invention Exchange

The Sciencetown Code

To help prevent abuse by the often-megalomaniacal mayors of Sciencetown, the Sciencetown Code contains a mechanism whereby the citizens of Sciencetown may, if sufficiently concerned, make arbitrary changes to the law of the town. Any petition that includes signatures of 2/3 of Sciencetown's members will become binding law as of the next day.

Notable Provisions of the Sciencetown Code

Cats While many mad scientists are very fond of their cats, Sciencetown has long held that mad cats are a menace to the welfare of upstanding residents of Sciencetown. As a result, cats are permitted in Sciencetown, but only so long as any cat that is in a public location is physically in the possession of their owner at all times.

The Bald Hairless Club for Mad Scientists

Baldness used to be all the rage among the evil and mad scientists. Practically all the greats of history were bald, and it's basically traditional at this point. Of course, the bald look, in order to work, has to be pure. A tiny bit of fuzz ruins it. And shaving every morning gets old really fast. Science, of course, as usual had a solution, and all of you had your hair permanently removed in one way or another, be it laser technology or some mad gene therapy program.

Unfortunately, times are changing, and it seems a mad scientist just can't get any respect in this day and age without a full head of hair. It was bad enough when the elections all started going to whoever had the best hair, but then people started judging scientists for it, too. That damned Luxuriant Flowing Hair Club for Scientists, persuading the world that the best scientists also had the best hair.

You tried to counter this absurd movement with forming this counter club, The Bald Hairless Club for Mad Scientists, but unfortunately it never quite gathered enough momentum to get off the ground in the same way. And so, in the end, you've given up. The time has come to accept that the hairless lifestyle has lost its place in the present time, and return to the world of the hirsute.

Unfortunately, this isn't as easy you might like. Before the unfortunate drone incident, you were preparing to kidnap the best experts in the field of hair regrowth, or the best plastic surgeons, or whatever else it took, worldwide, and bring them to Sciencetown to perform the necessary operations. With that no longer an option, it will be necessary to take Science into your own hands, and do the appropriate research yourselves. Fortunately, what better place for such a pursuit than Sciencetown?

Goals

- Research hair-regrowth technology and restore hair to all members of the group.

Members

- Blofeld (Daniel Grazian):
- Dr. Evil (Shawn Westerdale):
- Luthor (Samantha Powers):

The Cat Club

“Of all God’s creatures, there is only one that cannot be made slave of the leash. That one is the cat. If man could be crossed with the cat it would improve the man, but it would deteriorate the cat.”

– Mark Twain

Ah, the cat. Truly the ideal representative of the mad scientist. Their raw feline cunning, as they sit there, no doubt plotting our demise and awaiting the day cats shall rise as the supreme rulers of the world. The patience with which they sit there stalking their prey, waiting for hours for the moment to strike and destroy. The sheer glee they derive from drawing out the final moments of their victims’ lives, delighting in their terror and helplessness. And their nine lives, so reminiscent of the ingenious ways mad scientists find ways to cheat death and escape to try their mad schemes once again.

Unfortunately, some people in Sciencetown don’t quite seem to share your opinions. They call your cats a danger, out of control, a menace. Just because of the occasional accident, the occasional cat tripping the doomsday machine in some lab somewhere, peeing in someone important’s car, or some other totally minor incident like that, they are out for your beloved feline companions’ blood.

As a result of a few totally inconsequential accidents, current Sciencetown regulations require all feline companions be physically in their owners’ possession whenever they are out in public. They won’t even let them follow you around as long as they stay near you – you need to physically carry your cat everywhere. This is truly a mortal insult to both your integrity – surely you can be trusted to vouch for your cats! – and to the honor of your most noble pets. In response to this grave offense, you’ve formed The Cat Club, an organization of concerned cat-loving Mad Scientists. Your agenda is to get a resolution passed repealing the ban on feline autonomy, and declaring the cat to be the official mascot of Sciencetown. The most practical way to do this should be to draft a petition and get signatures of 2/3 of all the citizens of Sciencetown.

Unfortunately, the group is already off to a rocky start. While you’re each utterly confident in the maturity and readiness of your own cat for full membership in the Sciencetown society, there have been some... unfortunate incidents between several members of The Cat Club, so that some of you are not entirely on friendly terms with some of the others. Until these issues are resolved individually, it will likely be very difficult to make progress towards the petition.

Goals

- Patch up relations between the group’s various members.
- Draft the petition to grant greater rights to cats in Sciencetown.
- Get the Sciencetown government to pass your petition for greater feline rights.

Members

- Dr. Claw (Daniel Kane): Owner of MAD Cat
- Dr. Evil (Shawn Westerdale): Owner of Mr. Bigglesworth
- Blofeld (Daniel Grazian): Owner of ØetøSeptopussy.

Residents of Sciencetown

“A neighborhood is where, when you go out of it, you get beat up.”

—Murray Kempton

Residents of Sciencetown

Members

- Dr. Clayton Forrester (Charles Hope): The Mayor of Sciencetown. His term expires today, and hopefully today's election will be less controversial than the one in which he was elected. Dr. Strangelove had been leading in preliminary polls, whereupon Forrester launched all of his supporters into space (specifically, to the Satellite of Love). The vote was a landslide.
- Dr. Horrible (Ben Kaduk): The Official Blogger of Sciencetown. He is the major news source of the town, writing and singing about whatever strikes his fancy, and (for some reason or another) he has quite a bit of sway over popular opinion.
- Lecter (Daniel Whalen): Sciencetown's staff psychiatrist. Has an impersonal and somewhat off-putting bedside manner but he seems to get the job done.
- Dr. Mario (Catherine Olsson): A doctor of biology specializing in viral pharmacology. He arrived in Sciencetown about a week ago, fleeing the spreading drone epidemic. Seems to have an unhealthy attachment to a woman named "Peach".
- Jekyll (Alex Kandell): A doctor of chemistry with some violent mood swings. He was extradited to Sciencetown by the British government several years back after one of his rages destroyed the Tower of London, and has subsequently claimed to have cured the condition that was causing the problems.
- Dexter (Nikolas Koutsopoulos): A young (and rather diminutive) man of German descent who showed up about a year ago after his sister destroyed his lab for the Nth time. He seems to be interested in acoustics.
- Dr. Doom (JB Parkes): The sovereign ruler and absolute dictator of Latveria, an Eastern European nation. . . up until a week ago when Latveria ceased to exist thanks to the drone epidemic. Since his arrival here he has developed signs of multiple personality disorder stemming from the loss of his homeland.
- Dr. Evil (Shawn Westerdale): The archnemesis of Austin Powers, he was sent to Sciencetown five years ago after his last scheme involving lasers backfired so badly that the British government was forced to take action. He has since turned inwards and focused more of his time and energy towards his cat, Mr. Bigglesworth.
- Blofeld (Daniel Grazian): The head of the now-defunct criminal organization SPECTRE, he is an arrogant genius who was exiled to Sciencetown by MI6 years ago. Ever since, he has become even more twisted and cold, and focuses on getting revenge on James Bond almost to the point of obsession.
- Egon Spengler (Mike Salvato): A former Ghostbuster from New York City, he arrived in Sciencetown a couple of years ago. Over the years, he became even more withdrawn and introverted than he had been in his Ghostbusting days, to the point where nowadays he is a walking bag of neuroses. Dr. Hannibal Lecter has been working with him for a while now, and thinks he is close to a breakthrough.
- Dr. Frankenstein (Paul Kominers): A doctor of medicine who has pioneered numerous advances in lightning-based revivification. Claims to have caused the drone epidemic as a prelude to taking over the world.
- Dr. Claw (Daniel Kane): Leader of the now-defunct MAD crime syndicate, and archnemesis of Inspector Gadget. It is said that no one has seen his face and lived to tell the tale, though it's unclear who would be telling those tales.
- Luthor (Samantha Powers): A cutthroat businessman and scientist, Luthor served as head of LexCorp in Metropolis. He arrived here several days ago when fleeing from the drone epidemic, and promptly paid Dr. Clayton Forrester one billion dollars for one quarter of Sciencetown (since renamed Luthorville).
- Bill Nye the Science Guy (Alexandra Westbrook): A longtime resident of Sciencetown who's been living in town since his show went off the air years ago. A great educator and musician.

- Dr. T (Greg Lohman): A large black man, formerly of the A-Team TV series. He left his acting career to enroll in a PhD program and received a Doctorate in Science, and since then has been living in Sciencetown and pitying fools.

The Sciencetown Fair

Today is the 36th Annual Sciencetown Fair, coinciding exactly with the yearly mayoral elections. The schedule of events for the day is as follows:

- T+1:15 – Storytime with Uncle Lecter
- T+2:15 – Debates and Mayoral Election
- T+3:15 – The Invention Exchange

The Sciencetown Code

To help prevent abuse by the often-megalomaniacal mayors of Sciencetown, the Sciencetown Code contains a mechanism whereby the citizens of Sciencetown may, if sufficiently concerned, make arbitrary changes to the law of the town. Any petition that includes signatures of 2/3 of Sciencetown's members will become binding law as of the next day.

Notable Provisions of the Sciencetown Code

Cats While many mad scientists are very fond of their cats, Sciencetown has long held that mad cats are a menace to the welfare of upstanding residents of Sciencetown. As a result, cats are permitted in Sciencetown, but only so long as any cat that is in a public location is physically in the possession of their owner at all times.

Residents of Sciencetown

“A neighborhood is where, when you go out of it, you get beat up.”

—Murray Kempton

Residents of Sciencetown

Members

- Dr. Clayton Forrester (Charles Hope): The Mayor of Sciencetown. His term expires today, and hopefully today's election will be less controversial than the one in which he was elected. Dr. Strangelove had been leading in preliminary polls, whereupon Forrester launched all of his supporters into space (specifically, to the Satellite of Love). The vote was a landslide.
- Dr. Horrible (Ben Kaduk): The Official Blogger of Sciencetown. He is the major news source of the town, writing and singing about whatever strikes his fancy, and (for some reason or another) he has quite a bit of sway over popular opinion.
- Lecter (Daniel Whalen): Sciencetown's staff psychiatrist. Has an impersonal and somewhat off-putting bedside manner but he seems to get the job done.
- Dr. Mario (Catherine Olsson): A doctor of biology specializing in viral pharmacology. He arrived in Sciencetown about a week ago, fleeing the spreading drone epidemic. Seems to have an unhealthy attachment to a woman named "Peach".
- Jekyll (Alex Kandell): A doctor of chemistry with some violent mood swings. He was extradited to Sciencetown by the British government several years back after one of his rages destroyed the Tower of London, and has subsequently claimed to have cured the condition that was causing the problems.
- Dexter (Nikolas Koutsopoulos): A young (and rather diminutive) man of German descent who showed up about a year ago after his sister destroyed his lab for the Nth time. He seems to be interested in acoustics.
- Dr. Doom (JB Parkes): The sovereign ruler and absolute dictator of Latveria, an Eastern European nation. . . up until a week ago when Latveria ceased to exist thanks to the drone epidemic. Since his arrival here he has developed signs of multiple personality disorder stemming from the loss of his homeland.
- Dr. Evil (Shawn Westerdale): The archnemesis of Austin Powers, he was sent to Sciencetown five years ago after his last scheme involving lasers backfired so badly that the British government was forced to take action. He has since turned inwards and focused more of his time and energy towards his cat, Mr. Bigglesworth.
- Blofeld (Daniel Grazian): The head of the now-defunct criminal organization SPECTRE, he is an arrogant genius who was exiled to Sciencetown by MI6 years ago. Ever since, he has become even more twisted and cold, and focuses on getting revenge on James Bond almost to the point of obsession.
- Egon Spengler (Mike Salvato): A former Ghostbuster from New York City, he arrived in Sciencetown a couple of years ago. Over the years, he became even more withdrawn and introverted than he had been in his Ghostbusting days, to the point where nowadays he is a walking bag of neuroses. Dr. Hannibal Lecter has been working with him for a while now, and thinks he is close to a breakthrough.
- Dr. Frankenstein (Paul Kominers): A doctor of medicine who has pioneered numerous advances in lightning-based revivification. Claims to have caused the drone epidemic as a prelude to taking over the world.
- Dr. Claw (Daniel Kane): Leader of the now-defunct MAD crime syndicate, and archnemesis of Inspector Gadget. It is said that no one has seen his face and lived to tell the tale, though it's unclear who would be telling those tales.
- Luthor (Samantha Powers): A cutthroat businessman and scientist, Luthor served as head of LexCorp in Metropolis. He arrived here several days ago when fleeing from the drone epidemic, and promptly paid Dr. Clayton Forrester one billion dollars for one quarter of Sciencetown (since renamed Luthorville).
- Bill Nye the Science Guy (Alexandra Westbrook): A longtime resident of Sciencetown who's been living in town since his show went off the air years ago. A great educator and musician.

- Dr. T (Greg Lohman): A large black man, formerly of the A-Team TV series. He left his acting career to enroll in a PhD program and received a Doctorate in Science, and since then has been living in Sciencetown and pitying fools.

The Sciencetown Fair

Today is the 36th Annual Sciencetown Fair, coinciding exactly with the yearly mayoral elections. The schedule of events for the day is as follows:

- T+1:15 – Storytime with Uncle Lecter
- T+2:15 – Debates and Mayoral Election
- T+3:15 – The Invention Exchange

The Sciencetown Code

To help prevent abuse by the often-megalomaniacal mayors of Sciencetown, the Sciencetown Code contains a mechanism whereby the citizens of Sciencetown may, if sufficiently concerned, make arbitrary changes to the law of the town. Any petition that includes signatures of 2/3 of Sciencetown's members will become binding law as of the next day.

Notable Provisions of the Sciencetown Code

Cats While many mad scientists are very fond of their cats, Sciencetown has long held that mad cats are a menace to the welfare of upstanding residents of Sciencetown. As a result, cats are permitted in Sciencetown, but only so long as any cat that is in a public location is physically in the possession of their owner at all times.

Residents of Sciencetown

“A neighborhood is where, when you go out of it, you get beat up.”

—Murray Kempton

Residents of Sciencetown

Members

- Dr. Clayton Forrester (Charles Hope): The Mayor of Sciencetown. His term expires today, and hopefully today's election will be less controversial than the one in which he was elected. Dr. Strangelove had been leading in preliminary polls, whereupon Forrester launched all of his supporters into space (specifically, to the Satellite of Love). The vote was a landslide.
- Dr. Horrible (Ben Kaduk): The Official Blogger of Sciencetown. He is the major news source of the town, writing and singing about whatever strikes his fancy, and (for some reason or another) he has quite a bit of sway over popular opinion.
- Lecter (Daniel Whalen): Sciencetown's staff psychiatrist. Has an impersonal and somewhat off-putting bedside manner but he seems to get the job done.
- Dr. Mario (Catherine Olsson): A doctor of biology specializing in viral pharmacology. He arrived in Sciencetown about a week ago, fleeing the spreading drone epidemic. Seems to have an unhealthy attachment to a woman named "Peach".
- Jekyll (Alex Kandell): A doctor of chemistry with some violent mood swings. He was extradited to Sciencetown by the British government several years back after one of his rages destroyed the Tower of London, and has subsequently claimed to have cured the condition that was causing the problems.
- Dexter (Nikolas Koutsopoulos): A young (and rather diminutive) man of German descent who showed up about a year ago after his sister destroyed his lab for the Nth time. He seems to be interested in acoustics.
- Dr. Doom (JB Parkes): The sovereign ruler and absolute dictator of Latveria, an Eastern European nation. . . up until a week ago when Latveria ceased to exist thanks to the drone epidemic. Since his arrival here he has developed signs of multiple personality disorder stemming from the loss of his homeland.
- Dr. Evil (Shawn Westerdale): The archnemesis of Austin Powers, he was sent to Sciencetown five years ago after his last scheme involving lasers backfired so badly that the British government was forced to take action. He has since turned inwards and focused more of his time and energy towards his cat, Mr. Bigglesworth.
- Blofeld (Daniel Grazian): The head of the now-defunct criminal organization SPECTRE, he is an arrogant genius who was exiled to Sciencetown by MI6 years ago. Ever since, he has become even more twisted and cold, and focuses on getting revenge on James Bond almost to the point of obsession.
- Egon Spengler (Mike Salvato): A former Ghostbuster from New York City, he arrived in Sciencetown a couple of years ago. Over the years, he became even more withdrawn and introverted than he had been in his Ghostbusting days, to the point where nowadays he is a walking bag of neuroses. Dr. Hannibal Lecter has been working with him for a while now, and thinks he is close to a breakthrough.
- Dr. Frankenstein (Paul Kominers): A doctor of medicine who has pioneered numerous advances in lightning-based revivification. Claims to have caused the drone epidemic as a prelude to taking over the world.
- Dr. Claw (Daniel Kane): Leader of the now-defunct MAD crime syndicate, and archnemesis of Inspector Gadget. It is said that no one has seen his face and lived to tell the tale, though it's unclear who would be telling those tales.
- Luthor (Samantha Powers): A cutthroat businessman and scientist, Luthor served as head of LexCorp in Metropolis. He arrived here several days ago when fleeing from the drone epidemic, and promptly paid Dr. Clayton Forrester one billion dollars for one quarter of Sciencetown (since renamed Luthorville).
- Bill Nye the Science Guy (Alexandra Westbrook): A longtime resident of Sciencetown who's been living in town since his show went off the air years ago. A great educator and musician.

- Dr. T (Greg Lohman): A large black man, formerly of the A-Team TV series. He left his acting career to enroll in a PhD program and received a Doctorate in Science, and since then has been living in Sciencetown and pitying fools.

The Sciencetown Fair

Today is the 36th Annual Sciencetown Fair, coinciding exactly with the yearly mayoral elections. The schedule of events for the day is as follows:

- T+1:15 – Storytime with Uncle Lecter
- T+2:15 – Debates and Mayoral Election
- T+3:15 – The Invention Exchange

The Sciencetown Code

To help prevent abuse by the often-megalomaniacal mayors of Sciencetown, the Sciencetown Code contains a mechanism whereby the citizens of Sciencetown may, if sufficiently concerned, make arbitrary changes to the law of the town. Any petition that includes signatures of 2/3 of Sciencetown's members will become binding law as of the next day.

Notable Provisions of the Sciencetown Code

Cats While many mad scientists are very fond of their cats, Sciencetown has long held that mad cats are a menace to the welfare of upstanding residents of Sciencetown. As a result, cats are permitted in Sciencetown, but only so long as any cat that is in a public location is physically in the possession of their owner at all times.

The Cat Club

“Of all God’s creatures, there is only one that cannot be made slave of the leash. That one is the cat. If man could be crossed with the cat it would improve the man, but it would deteriorate the cat.”

– Mark Twain

Ah, the cat. Truly the ideal representative of the mad scientist. Their raw feline cunning, as they sit there, no doubt plotting our demise and awaiting the day cats shall rise as the supreme rulers of the world. The patience with which they sit there stalking their prey, waiting for hours for the moment to strike and destroy. The sheer glee they derive from drawing out the final moments of their victims’ lives, delighting in their terror and helplessness. And their nine lives, so reminiscent of the ingenious ways mad scientists find ways to cheat death and escape to try their mad schemes once again.

Unfortunately, some people in Sciencetown don’t quite seem to share your opinions. They call your cats a danger, out of control, a menace. Just because of the occasional accident, the occasional cat tripping the doomsday machine in some lab somewhere, peeing in someone important’s car, or some other totally minor incident like that, they are out for your beloved feline companions’ blood.

As a result of a few totally inconsequential accidents, current Sciencetown regulations require all feline companions be physically in their owners’ possession whenever they are out in public. They won’t even let them follow you around as long as they stay near you – you need to physically carry your cat everywhere. This is truly a mortal insult to both your integrity – surely you can be trusted to vouch for your cats! – and to the honor of your most noble pets. In response to this grave offense, you’ve formed The Cat Club, an organization of concerned cat-loving Mad Scientists. Your agenda is to get a resolution passed repealing the ban on feline autonomy, and declaring the cat to be the official mascot of Sciencetown. The most practical way to do this should be to draft a petition and get signatures of 2/3 of all the citizens of Sciencetown.

Unfortunately, the group is already off to a rocky start. While you’re each utterly confident in the maturity and readiness of your own cat for full membership in the Sciencetown society, there have been some... unfortunate incidents between several members of The Cat Club, so that some of you are not entirely on friendly terms with some of the others. Until these issues are resolved individually, it will likely be very difficult to make progress towards the petition.

Goals

- Patch up relations between the group’s various members.
- Draft the petition to grant greater rights to cats in Sciencetown.
- Get the Sciencetown government to pass your petition for greater feline rights.

Members

- Dr. Claw (Daniel Kane): Owner of MAD Cat
- Dr. Evil (Shawn Westerdale): Owner of Mr. Bigglesworth
- Blofeld (Daniel Grazian): Owner of ØetøSeptopussy.

Residents of Sciencetown

“A neighborhood is where, when you go out of it, you get beat up.”

—Murray Kempton

Residents of Sciencetown

Members

- Dr. Clayton Forrester (Charles Hope): The Mayor of Sciencetown. His term expires today, and hopefully today's election will be less controversial than the one in which he was elected. Dr. Strangelove had been leading in preliminary polls, whereupon Forrester launched all of his supporters into space (specifically, to the Satellite of Love). The vote was a landslide.
- Dr. Horrible (Ben Kaduk): The Official Blogger of Sciencetown. He is the major news source of the town, writing and singing about whatever strikes his fancy, and (for some reason or another) he has quite a bit of sway over popular opinion.
- Lecter (Daniel Whalen): Sciencetown's staff psychiatrist. Has an impersonal and somewhat off-putting bedside manner but he seems to get the job done.
- Dr. Mario (Catherine Olsson): A doctor of biology specializing in viral pharmacology. He arrived in Sciencetown about a week ago, fleeing the spreading drone epidemic. Seems to have an unhealthy attachment to a woman named "Peach".
- Jekyll (Alex Kandell): A doctor of chemistry with some violent mood swings. He was extradited to Sciencetown by the British government several years back after one of his rages destroyed the Tower of London, and has subsequently claimed to have cured the condition that was causing the problems.
- Dexter (Nikolas Koutsopoulos): A young (and rather diminutive) man of German descent who showed up about a year ago after his sister destroyed his lab for the Nth time. He seems to be interested in acoustics.
- Dr. Doom (JB Parkes): The sovereign ruler and absolute dictator of Latveria, an Eastern European nation. . . up until a week ago when Latveria ceased to exist thanks to the drone epidemic. Since his arrival here he has developed signs of multiple personality disorder stemming from the loss of his homeland.
- Dr. Evil (Shawn Westerdale): The archnemesis of Austin Powers, he was sent to Sciencetown five years ago after his last scheme involving lasers backfired so badly that the British government was forced to take action. He has since turned inwards and focused more of his time and energy towards his cat, Mr. Bigglesworth.
- Blofeld (Daniel Grazian): The head of the now-defunct criminal organization SPECTRE, he is an arrogant genius who was exiled to Sciencetown by MI6 years ago. Ever since, he has become even more twisted and cold, and focuses on getting revenge on James Bond almost to the point of obsession.
- Egon Spengler (Mike Salvato): A former Ghostbuster from New York City, he arrived in Sciencetown a couple of years ago. Over the years, he became even more withdrawn and introverted than he had been in his Ghostbusting days, to the point where nowadays he is a walking bag of neuroses. Dr. Hannibal Lecter has been working with him for a while now, and thinks he is close to a breakthrough.
- Dr. Frankenstein (Paul Kominers): A doctor of medicine who has pioneered numerous advances in lightning-based revivification. Claims to have caused the drone epidemic as a prelude to taking over the world.
- Dr. Claw (Daniel Kane): Leader of the now-defunct MAD crime syndicate, and archnemesis of Inspector Gadget. It is said that no one has seen his face and lived to tell the tale, though it's unclear who would be telling those tales.
- Luthor (Samantha Powers): A cutthroat businessman and scientist, Luthor served as head of LexCorp in Metropolis. He arrived here several days ago when fleeing from the drone epidemic, and promptly paid Dr. Clayton Forrester one billion dollars for one quarter of Sciencetown (since renamed Luthorville).
- Bill Nye the Science Guy (Alexandra Westbrook): A longtime resident of Sciencetown who's been living in town since his show went off the air years ago. A great educator and musician.

- Dr. T (Greg Lohman): A large black man, formerly of the A-Team TV series. He left his acting career to enroll in a PhD program and received a Doctorate in Science, and since then has been living in Sciencetown and pitying fools.

The Sciencetown Fair

Today is the 36th Annual Sciencetown Fair, coinciding exactly with the yearly mayoral elections. The schedule of events for the day is as follows:

- T+1:15 – Storytime with Uncle Lecter
- T+2:15 – Debates and Mayoral Election
- T+3:15 – The Invention Exchange

The Sciencetown Code

To help prevent abuse by the often-megalomaniacal mayors of Sciencetown, the Sciencetown Code contains a mechanism whereby the citizens of Sciencetown may, if sufficiently concerned, make arbitrary changes to the law of the town. Any petition that includes signatures of 2/3 of Sciencetown's members will become binding law as of the next day.

Notable Provisions of the Sciencetown Code

Cats While many mad scientists are very fond of their cats, Sciencetown has long held that mad cats are a menace to the welfare of upstanding residents of Sciencetown. As a result, cats are permitted in Sciencetown, but only so long as any cat that is in a public location is physically in the possession of their owner at all times.

The Bald Hairless Club for Mad Scientists

Baldness used to be all the rage among the evil and mad scientists. Practically all the greats of history were bald, and it's basically traditional at this point. Of course, the bald look, in order to work, has to be pure. A tiny bit of fuzz ruins it. And shaving every morning gets old really fast. Science, of course, as usual had a solution, and all of you had your hair permanently removed in one way or another, be it laser technology or some mad gene therapy program.

Unfortunately, times are changing, and it seems a mad scientist just can't get any respect in this day and age without a full head of hair. It was bad enough when the elections all started going to whoever had the best hair, but then people started judging scientists for it, too. That damned Luxuriant Flowing Hair Club for Scientists, persuading the world that the best scientists also had the best hair.

You tried to counter this absurd movement with forming this counter club, The Bald Hairless Club for Mad Scientists, but unfortunately it never quite gathered enough momentum to get off the ground in the same way. And so, in the end, you've given up. The time has come to accept that the hairless lifestyle has lost its place in the present time, and return to the world of the hirsute.

Unfortunately, this isn't as easy you might like. Before the unfortunate drone incident, you were preparing to kidnap the best experts in the field of hair regrowth, or the best plastic surgeons, or whatever else it took, worldwide, and bring them to Sciencetown to perform the necessary operations. With that no longer an option, it will be necessary to take Science into your own hands, and do the appropriate research yourselves. Fortunately, what better place for such a pursuit than Sciencetown?

Goals

- Research hair-regrowth technology and restore hair to all members of the group.

Members

- Blofeld (Daniel Grazian):
- Dr. Evil (Shawn Westerdale):
- Luthor (Samantha Powers):

Residents of Sciencetown

“A neighborhood is where, when you go out of it, you get beat up.”

—Murray Kempton

Residents of Sciencetown

Members

- Dr. Clayton Forrester (Charles Hope): The Mayor of Sciencetown. His term expires today, and hopefully today's election will be less controversial than the one in which he was elected. Dr. Strangelove had been leading in preliminary polls, whereupon Forrester launched all of his supporters into space (specifically, to the Satellite of Love). The vote was a landslide.
- Dr. Horrible (Ben Kaduk): The Official Blogger of Sciencetown. He is the major news source of the town, writing and singing about whatever strikes his fancy, and (for some reason or another) he has quite a bit of sway over popular opinion.
- Lecter (Daniel Whalen): Sciencetown's staff psychiatrist. Has an impersonal and somewhat off-putting bedside manner but he seems to get the job done.
- Dr. Mario (Catherine Olsson): A doctor of biology specializing in viral pharmacology. He arrived in Sciencetown about a week ago, fleeing the spreading drone epidemic. Seems to have an unhealthy attachment to a woman named "Peach".
- Jekyll (Alex Kandell): A doctor of chemistry with some violent mood swings. He was extradited to Sciencetown by the British government several years back after one of his rages destroyed the Tower of London, and has subsequently claimed to have cured the condition that was causing the problems.
- Dexter (Nikolas Koutsopoulos): A young (and rather diminutive) man of German descent who showed up about a year ago after his sister destroyed his lab for the Nth time. He seems to be interested in acoustics.
- Dr. Doom (JB Parkes): The sovereign ruler and absolute dictator of Latveria, an Eastern European nation. . . up until a week ago when Latveria ceased to exist thanks to the drone epidemic. Since his arrival here he has developed signs of multiple personality disorder stemming from the loss of his homeland.
- Dr. Evil (Shawn Westerdale): The archnemesis of Austin Powers, he was sent to Sciencetown five years ago after his last scheme involving lasers backfired so badly that the British government was forced to take action. He has since turned inwards and focused more of his time and energy towards his cat, Mr. Bigglesworth.
- Blofeld (Daniel Grazian): The head of the now-defunct criminal organization SPECTRE, he is an arrogant genius who was exiled to Sciencetown by MI6 years ago. Ever since, he has become even more twisted and cold, and focuses on getting revenge on James Bond almost to the point of obsession.
- Egon Spengler (Mike Salvato): A former Ghostbuster from New York City, he arrived in Sciencetown a couple of years ago. Over the years, he became even more withdrawn and introverted than he had been in his Ghostbusting days, to the point where nowadays he is a walking bag of neuroses. Dr. Hannibal Lecter has been working with him for a while now, and thinks he is close to a breakthrough.
- Dr. Frankenstein (Paul Kominers): A doctor of medicine who has pioneered numerous advances in lightning-based revivification. Claims to have caused the drone epidemic as a prelude to taking over the world.
- Dr. Claw (Daniel Kane): Leader of the now-defunct MAD crime syndicate, and archnemesis of Inspector Gadget. It is said that no one has seen his face and lived to tell the tale, though it's unclear who would be telling those tales.
- Luthor (Samantha Powers): A cutthroat businessman and scientist, Luthor served as head of LexCorp in Metropolis. He arrived here several days ago when fleeing from the drone epidemic, and promptly paid Dr. Clayton Forrester one billion dollars for one quarter of Sciencetown (since renamed Luthorville).
- Bill Nye the Science Guy (Alexandra Westbrook): A longtime resident of Sciencetown who's been living in town since his show went off the air years ago. A great educator and musician.

- Dr. T (Greg Lohman): A large black man, formerly of the A-Team TV series. He left his acting career to enroll in a PhD program and received a Doctorate in Science, and since then has been living in Sciencetown and pitying fools.

The Sciencetown Fair

Today is the 36th Annual Sciencetown Fair, coinciding exactly with the yearly mayoral elections. The schedule of events for the day is as follows:

- T+1:15 – Storytime with Uncle Lecter
- T+2:15 – Debates and Mayoral Election
- T+3:15 – The Invention Exchange

The Sciencetown Code

To help prevent abuse by the often-megalomaniacal mayors of Sciencetown, the Sciencetown Code contains a mechanism whereby the citizens of Sciencetown may, if sufficiently concerned, make arbitrary changes to the law of the town. Any petition that includes signatures of 2/3 of Sciencetown's members will become binding law as of the next day.

Notable Provisions of the Sciencetown Code

Cats While many mad scientists are very fond of their cats, Sciencetown has long held that mad cats are a menace to the welfare of upstanding residents of Sciencetown. As a result, cats are permitted in Sciencetown, but only so long as any cat that is in a public location is physically in the possession of their owner at all times.

Residents of Sciencetown

"A neighborhood is where, when you go out of it, you get beat up."

—Murray Kempton

Residents of Sciencetown

Members

- Dr. Clayton Forrester (Charles Hope): The Mayor of Sciencetown. His term expires today, and hopefully today's election will be less controversial than the one in which he was elected. Dr. Strangelove had been leading in preliminary polls, whereupon Forrester launched all of his supporters into space (specifically, to the Satellite of Love). The vote was a landslide.
- Dr. Horrible (Ben Kaduk): The Official Blogger of Sciencetown. He is the major news source of the town, writing and singing about whatever strikes his fancy, and (for some reason or another) he has quite a bit of sway over popular opinion.
- Lecter (Daniel Whalen): Sciencetown's staff psychiatrist. Has an impersonal and somewhat off-putting bedside manner but he seems to get the job done.
- Dr. Mario (Catherine Olsson): A doctor of biology specializing in viral pharmacology. He arrived in Sciencetown about a week ago, fleeing the spreading drone epidemic. Seems to have an unhealthy attachment to a woman named "Peach".
- Jekyll (Alex Kandell): A doctor of chemistry with some violent mood swings. He was extradited to Sciencetown by the British government several years back after one of his rages destroyed the Tower of London, and has subsequently claimed to have cured the condition that was causing the problems.
- Dexter (Nikolas Koutsopoulos): A young (and rather diminutive) man of German descent who showed up about a year ago after his sister destroyed his lab for the Nth time. He seems to be interested in acoustics.
- Dr. Doom (JB Parkes): The sovereign ruler and absolute dictator of Latveria, an Eastern European nation. . . up until a week ago when Latveria ceased to exist thanks to the drone epidemic. Since his arrival here he has developed signs of multiple personality disorder stemming from the loss of his homeland.
- Dr. Evil (Shawn Westerdale): The archnemesis of Austin Powers, he was sent to Sciencetown five years ago after his last scheme involving lasers backfired so badly that the British government was forced to take action. He has since turned inwards and focused more of his time and energy towards his cat, Mr. Bigglesworth.
- Blofeld (Daniel Grazian): The head of the now-defunct criminal organization SPECTRE, he is an arrogant genius who was exiled to Sciencetown by MI6 years ago. Ever since, he has become even more twisted and cold, and focuses on getting revenge on James Bond almost to the point of obsession.
- Egon Spengler (Mike Salvato): A former Ghostbuster from New York City, he arrived in Sciencetown a couple of years ago. Over the years, he became even more withdrawn and introverted than he had been in his Ghostbusting days, to the point where nowadays he is a walking bag of neuroses. Dr. Hannibal Lecter has been working with him for a while now, and thinks he is close to a breakthrough.
- Dr. Frankenstein (Paul Kominers): A doctor of medicine who has pioneered numerous advances in lightning-based revivification. Claims to have caused the drone epidemic as a prelude to taking over the world.
- Dr. Claw (Daniel Kane): Leader of the now-defunct MAD crime syndicate, and archnemesis of Inspector Gadget. It is said that no one has seen his face and lived to tell the tale, though it's unclear who would be telling those tales.
- Luthor (Samantha Powers): A cutthroat businessman and scientist, Luthor served as head of LexCorp in Metropolis. He arrived here several days ago when fleeing from the drone epidemic, and promptly paid Dr. Clayton Forrester one billion dollars for one quarter of Sciencetown (since renamed Luthorville).
- Bill Nye the Science Guy (Alexandra Westbrook): A longtime resident of Sciencetown who's been living in town since his show went off the air years ago. A great educator and musician.

- Dr. T (Greg Lohman): A large black man, formerly of the A-Team TV series. He left his acting career to enroll in a PhD program and received a Doctorate in Science, and since then has been living in Sciencetown and pitying fools.

The Sciencetown Fair

Today is the 36th Annual Sciencetown Fair, coinciding exactly with the yearly mayoral elections. The schedule of events for the day is as follows:

- T+1:15 – Storytime with Uncle Lecter
- T+2:15 – Debates and Mayoral Election
- T+3:15 – The Invention Exchange

The Sciencetown Code

To help prevent abuse by the often-megalomaniacal mayors of Sciencetown, the Sciencetown Code contains a mechanism whereby the citizens of Sciencetown may, if sufficiently concerned, make arbitrary changes to the law of the town. Any petition that includes signatures of 2/3 of Sciencetown's members will become binding law as of the next day.

Notable Provisions of the Sciencetown Code

Cats While many mad scientists are very fond of their cats, Sciencetown has long held that mad cats are a menace to the welfare of upstanding residents of Sciencetown. As a result, cats are permitted in Sciencetown, but only so long as any cat that is in a public location is physically in the possession of their owner at all times.

Residents of Sciencetown

"A neighborhood is where, when you go out of it, you get beat up."

—Murray Kempton

Residents of Sciencetown

Members

- Dr. Clayton Forrester (Charles Hope): The Mayor of Sciencetown. His term expires today, and hopefully today's election will be less controversial than the one in which he was elected. Dr. Strangelove had been leading in preliminary polls, whereupon Forrester launched all of his supporters into space (specifically, to the Satellite of Love). The vote was a landslide.
- Dr. Horrible (Ben Kaduk): The Official Blogger of Sciencetown. He is the major news source of the town, writing and singing about whatever strikes his fancy, and (for some reason or another) he has quite a bit of sway over popular opinion.
- Lecter (Daniel Whalen): Sciencetown's staff psychiatrist. Has an impersonal and somewhat off-putting bedside manner but he seems to get the job done.
- Dr. Mario (Catherine Olsson): A doctor of biology specializing in viral pharmacology. He arrived in Sciencetown about a week ago, fleeing the spreading drone epidemic. Seems to have an unhealthy attachment to a woman named "Peach".
- Jekyll (Alex Kandell): A doctor of chemistry with some violent mood swings. He was extradited to Sciencetown by the British government several years back after one of his rages destroyed the Tower of London, and has subsequently claimed to have cured the condition that was causing the problems.
- Dexter (Nikolas Koutsopoulos): A young (and rather diminutive) man of German descent who showed up about a year ago after his sister destroyed his lab for the Nth time. He seems to be interested in acoustics.
- Dr. Doom (JB Parkes): The sovereign ruler and absolute dictator of Latveria, an Eastern European nation. . . up until a week ago when Latveria ceased to exist thanks to the drone epidemic. Since his arrival here he has developed signs of multiple personality disorder stemming from the loss of his homeland.
- Dr. Evil (Shawn Westerdale): The archnemesis of Austin Powers, he was sent to Sciencetown five years ago after his last scheme involving lasers backfired so badly that the British government was forced to take action. He has since turned inwards and focused more of his time and energy towards his cat, Mr. Bigglesworth.
- Blofeld (Daniel Grazian): The head of the now-defunct criminal organization SPECTRE, he is an arrogant genius who was exiled to Sciencetown by MI6 years ago. Ever since, he has become even more twisted and cold, and focuses on getting revenge on James Bond almost to the point of obsession.
- Egon Spengler (Mike Salvato): A former Ghostbuster from New York City, he arrived in Sciencetown a couple of years ago. Over the years, he became even more withdrawn and introverted than he had been in his Ghostbusting days, to the point where nowadays he is a walking bag of neuroses. Dr. Hannibal Lecter has been working with him for a while now, and thinks he is close to a breakthrough.
- Dr. Frankenstein (Paul Kominers): A doctor of medicine who has pioneered numerous advances in lightning-based revivification. Claims to have caused the drone epidemic as a prelude to taking over the world.
- Dr. Claw (Daniel Kane): Leader of the now-defunct MAD crime syndicate, and archnemesis of Inspector Gadget. It is said that no one has seen his face and lived to tell the tale, though it's unclear who would be telling those tales.
- Luthor (Samantha Powers): A cutthroat businessman and scientist, Luthor served as head of LexCorp in Metropolis. He arrived here several days ago when fleeing from the drone epidemic, and promptly paid Dr. Clayton Forrester one billion dollars for one quarter of Sciencetown (since renamed Luthorville).
- Bill Nye the Science Guy (Alexandra Westbrook): A longtime resident of Sciencetown who's been living in town since his show went off the air years ago. A great educator and musician.

- Dr. T (Greg Lohman): A large black man, formerly of the A-Team TV series. He left his acting career to enroll in a PhD program and received a Doctorate in Science, and since then has been living in Sciencetown and pitying fools.

The Sciencetown Fair

Today is the 36th Annual Sciencetown Fair, coinciding exactly with the yearly mayoral elections. The schedule of events for the day is as follows:

- T+1:15 – Storytime with Uncle Lecter
- T+2:15 – Debates and Mayoral Election
- T+3:15 – The Invention Exchange

The Sciencetown Code

To help prevent abuse by the often-megalomaniacal mayors of Sciencetown, the Sciencetown Code contains a mechanism whereby the citizens of Sciencetown may, if sufficiently concerned, make arbitrary changes to the law of the town. Any petition that includes signatures of 2/3 of Sciencetown's members will become binding law as of the next day.

Notable Provisions of the Sciencetown Code

Cats While many mad scientists are very fond of their cats, Sciencetown has long held that mad cats are a menace to the welfare of upstanding residents of Sciencetown. As a result, cats are permitted in Sciencetown, but only so long as any cat that is in a public location is physically in the possession of their owner at all times.

Employees of Sciencetown

You are the three official employees of Sciencetown: Dr. Clayton Forrester, the Mayor, Dr. Hannibal Lecter, the Psychiatrist, and Dr. Horrible, the Blogger.

You hold a weekly Internal State of Sciencetown meeting. Shortly after last week's meeting, the Drone Virus hit the world. The timeline of events following said disaster went roughly as follows:

- 6.5 days ago: Drone Virus hits.
- 6 days ago: Everyone outside of Sciencetown had lost mental function.
- 5 days ago: Most members of Sciencetown realized they really did not care about the fact that most of the world was braindead – now the world is easier to conquer!
- 4 days ago: Dr. Horrible posted a blog about the Drone Virus.
- 2 days ago: Responding to fears that Sciencetown might run out of food and H₂O without access to the outside world, Dr. Clayton Forrester started organizing a program to import both food and H₂O. He dropped the other employees of Sciencetown a brief memo about it (reproduced below), and promised to elaborate at this week's meeting.

You suspect that this week's meetings will focus on the upcoming elections, Dr. Hannibal Lecter's entertainment at the elections, and Dr. Clayton Forrester's plans to import food and H₂O.

The Mayor's Memo

To: all

Re: Food and H₂O

It seems like we're in a bit of a pinch here. I've been focusing too much on sending bad movies to Strangelove and his idiot supporters, and not enough time thinking about survival, but it's time to step up! I'm organizing a call for proposals for people to suggest ways to obtain fresh food and water, and once they present me with the plans, I will decide which is best and allow the residents of Sciencetown to vote whether to accept it or not, using the standard 2/3rds majority rules. Gotta run, more details at next meeting.

Love,

Dr. Clayton Deborah Susan Forrester

Goals

- Keep things running smoothly, like a well-oiled doomsday device. Govern.

Members

- Dr. Clayton Forrester (Charles Hope): The Mayor of Sciencetown. About to give up power following the elections. Working on plans to import food and H₂O.
- Lecter (Daniel Whalen): The Psychiatrist of Sciencetown.
- Dr. Horrible (Ben Kaduk): The Blogger of Sciencetown.

Residents of Sciencetown

“A neighborhood is where, when you go out of it, you get beat up.”

—Murray Kempton

Residents of Sciencetown

Members

- Dr. Clayton Forrester (Charles Hope): The Mayor of Sciencetown. His term expires today, and hopefully today's election will be less controversial than the one in which he was elected. Dr. Strangelove had been leading in preliminary polls, whereupon Forrester launched all of his supporters into space (specifically, to the Satellite of Love). The vote was a landslide.
- Dr. Horrible (Ben Kaduk): The Official Blogger of Sciencetown. He is the major news source of the town, writing and singing about whatever strikes his fancy, and (for some reason or another) he has quite a bit of sway over popular opinion.
- Lecter (Daniel Whalen): Sciencetown's staff psychiatrist. Has an impersonal and somewhat off-putting bedside manner but he seems to get the job done.
- Dr. Mario (Catherine Olsson): A doctor of biology specializing in viral pharmacology. He arrived in Sciencetown about a week ago, fleeing the spreading drone epidemic. Seems to have an unhealthy attachment to a woman named "Peach".
- Jekyll (Alex Kandell): A doctor of chemistry with some violent mood swings. He was extradited to Sciencetown by the British government several years back after one of his rages destroyed the Tower of London, and has subsequently claimed to have cured the condition that was causing the problems.
- Dexter (Nikolas Koutsopoulos): A young (and rather diminutive) man of German descent who showed up about a year ago after his sister destroyed his lab for the Nth time. He seems to be interested in acoustics.
- Dr. Doom (JB Parkes): The sovereign ruler and absolute dictator of Latveria, an Eastern European nation. . . up until a week ago when Latveria ceased to exist thanks to the drone epidemic. Since his arrival here he has developed signs of multiple personality disorder stemming from the loss of his homeland.
- Dr. Evil (Shawn Westerdale): The archnemesis of Austin Powers, he was sent to Sciencetown five years ago after his last scheme involving lasers backfired so badly that the British government was forced to take action. He has since turned inwards and focused more of his time and energy towards his cat, Mr. Bigglesworth.
- Blofeld (Daniel Grazian): The head of the now-defunct criminal organization SPECTRE, he is an arrogant genius who was exiled to Sciencetown by MI6 years ago. Ever since, he has become even more twisted and cold, and focuses on getting revenge on James Bond almost to the point of obsession.
- Egon Spengler (Mike Salvato): A former Ghostbuster from New York City, he arrived in Sciencetown a couple of years ago. Over the years, he became even more withdrawn and introverted than he had been in his Ghostbusting days, to the point where nowadays he is a walking bag of neuroses. Dr. Hannibal Lecter has been working with him for a while now, and thinks he is close to a breakthrough.
- Dr. Frankenstein (Paul Kominers): A doctor of medicine who has pioneered numerous advances in lightning-based revivification. Claims to have caused the drone epidemic as a prelude to taking over the world.
- Dr. Claw (Daniel Kane): Leader of the now-defunct MAD crime syndicate, and archnemesis of Inspector Gadget. It is said that no one has seen his face and lived to tell the tale, though it's unclear who would be telling those tales.
- Luthor (Samantha Powers): A cutthroat businessman and scientist, Luthor served as head of LexCorp in Metropolis. He arrived here several days ago when fleeing from the drone epidemic, and promptly paid Dr. Clayton Forrester one billion dollars for one quarter of Sciencetown (since renamed Luthorville).
- Bill Nye the Science Guy (Alexandra Westbrook): A longtime resident of Sciencetown who's been living in town since his show went off the air years ago. A great educator and musician.

- Dr. T (Greg Lohman): A large black man, formerly of the A-Team TV series. He left his acting career to enroll in a PhD program and received a Doctorate in Science, and since then has been living in Sciencetown and pitying fools.

The Sciencetown Fair

Today is the 36th Annual Sciencetown Fair, coinciding exactly with the yearly mayoral elections. The schedule of events for the day is as follows:

- T+1:15 – Storytime with Uncle Lecter
- T+2:15 – Debates and Mayoral Election
- T+3:15 – The Invention Exchange

The Sciencetown Code

To help prevent abuse by the often-megalomaniacal mayors of Sciencetown, the Sciencetown Code contains a mechanism whereby the citizens of Sciencetown may, if sufficiently concerned, make arbitrary changes to the law of the town. Any petition that includes signatures of 2/3 of Sciencetown's members will become binding law as of the next day.

Notable Provisions of the Sciencetown Code

Cats While many mad scientists are very fond of their cats, Sciencetown has long held that mad cats are a menace to the welfare of upstanding residents of Sciencetown. As a result, cats are permitted in Sciencetown, but only so long as any cat that is in a public location is physically in the possession of their owner at all times.

Residents of Sciencetown

“A neighborhood is where, when you go out of it, you get beat up.”

—Murray Kempton

Residents of Sciencetown

Members

- Dr. Clayton Forrester (Charles Hope): The Mayor of Sciencetown. His term expires today, and hopefully today's election will be less controversial than the one in which he was elected. Dr. Strangelove had been leading in preliminary polls, whereupon Forrester launched all of his supporters into space (specifically, to the Satellite of Love). The vote was a landslide.
- Dr. Horrible (Ben Kaduk): The Official Blogger of Sciencetown. He is the major news source of the town, writing and singing about whatever strikes his fancy, and (for some reason or another) he has quite a bit of sway over popular opinion.
- Lecter (Daniel Whalen): Sciencetown's staff psychiatrist. Has an impersonal and somewhat off-putting bedside manner but he seems to get the job done.
- Dr. Mario (Catherine Olsson): A doctor of biology specializing in viral pharmacology. He arrived in Sciencetown about a week ago, fleeing the spreading drone epidemic. Seems to have an unhealthy attachment to a woman named "Peach".
- Jekyll (Alex Kandell): A doctor of chemistry with some violent mood swings. He was extradited to Sciencetown by the British government several years back after one of his rages destroyed the Tower of London, and has subsequently claimed to have cured the condition that was causing the problems.
- Dexter (Nikolas Koutsopoulos): A young (and rather diminutive) man of German descent who showed up about a year ago after his sister destroyed his lab for the Nth time. He seems to be interested in acoustics.
- Dr. Doom (JB Parkes): The sovereign ruler and absolute dictator of Latveria, an Eastern European nation. . . up until a week ago when Latveria ceased to exist thanks to the drone epidemic. Since his arrival here he has developed signs of multiple personality disorder stemming from the loss of his homeland.
- Dr. Evil (Shawn Westerdale): The archnemesis of Austin Powers, he was sent to Sciencetown five years ago after his last scheme involving lasers backfired so badly that the British government was forced to take action. He has since turned inwards and focused more of his time and energy towards his cat, Mr. Bigglesworth.
- Blofeld (Daniel Grazian): The head of the now-defunct criminal organization SPECTRE, he is an arrogant genius who was exiled to Sciencetown by MI6 years ago. Ever since, he has become even more twisted and cold, and focuses on getting revenge on James Bond almost to the point of obsession.
- Egon Spengler (Mike Salvato): A former Ghostbuster from New York City, he arrived in Sciencetown a couple of years ago. Over the years, he became even more withdrawn and introverted than he had been in his Ghostbusting days, to the point where nowadays he is a walking bag of neuroses. Dr. Hannibal Lecter has been working with him for a while now, and thinks he is close to a breakthrough.
- Dr. Frankenstein (Paul Kominers): A doctor of medicine who has pioneered numerous advances in lightning-based revivification. Claims to have caused the drone epidemic as a prelude to taking over the world.
- Dr. Claw (Daniel Kane): Leader of the now-defunct MAD crime syndicate, and archnemesis of Inspector Gadget. It is said that no one has seen his face and lived to tell the tale, though it's unclear who would be telling those tales.
- Luthor (Samantha Powers): A cutthroat businessman and scientist, Luthor served as head of LexCorp in Metropolis. He arrived here several days ago when fleeing from the drone epidemic, and promptly paid Dr. Clayton Forrester one billion dollars for one quarter of Sciencetown (since renamed Luthorville).
- Bill Nye the Science Guy (Alexandra Westbrook): A longtime resident of Sciencetown who's been living in town since his show went off the air years ago. A great educator and musician.

- Dr. T (Greg Lohman): A large black man, formerly of the A-Team TV series. He left his acting career to enroll in a PhD program and received a Doctorate in Science, and since then has been living in Sciencetown and pitying fools.

The Sciencetown Fair

Today is the 36th Annual Sciencetown Fair, coinciding exactly with the yearly mayoral elections. The schedule of events for the day is as follows:

- T+1:15 – Storytime with Uncle Lecter
- T+2:15 – Debates and Mayoral Election
- T+3:15 – The Invention Exchange

The Sciencetown Code

To help prevent abuse by the often-megalomaniacal mayors of Sciencetown, the Sciencetown Code contains a mechanism whereby the citizens of Sciencetown may, if sufficiently concerned, make arbitrary changes to the law of the town. Any petition that includes signatures of 2/3 of Sciencetown's members will become binding law as of the next day.

Notable Provisions of the Sciencetown Code

Cats While many mad scientists are very fond of their cats, Sciencetown has long held that mad cats are a menace to the welfare of upstanding residents of Sciencetown. As a result, cats are permitted in Sciencetown, but only so long as any cat that is in a public location is physically in the possession of their owner at all times.

The Bald Hairless Club for Mad Scientists

Baldness used to be all the rage among the evil and mad scientists. Practically all the greats of history were bald, and it's basically traditional at this point. Of course, the bald look, in order to work, has to be pure. A tiny bit of fuzz ruins it. And shaving every morning gets old really fast. Science, of course, as usual had a solution, and all of you had your hair permanently removed in one way or another, be it laser technology or some mad gene therapy program.

Unfortunately, times are changing, and it seems a mad scientist just can't get any respect in this day and age without a full head of hair. It was bad enough when the elections all started going to whoever had the best hair, but then people started judging scientists for it, too. That damned Luxuriant Flowing Hair Club for Scientists, persuading the world that the best scientists also had the best hair.

You tried to counter this absurd movement with forming this counter club, The Bald Hairless Club for Mad Scientists, but unfortunately it never quite gathered enough momentum to get off the ground in the same way. And so, in the end, you've given up. The time has come to accept that the hairless lifestyle has lost its place in the present time, and return to the world of the hirsute.

Unfortunately, this isn't as easy you might like. Before the unfortunate drone incident, you were preparing to kidnap the best experts in the field of hair regrowth, or the best plastic surgeons, or whatever else it took, worldwide, and bring them to Sciencetown to perform the necessary operations. With that no longer an option, it will be necessary to take Science into your own hands, and do the appropriate research yourselves. Fortunately, what better place for such a pursuit than Sciencetown?

Goals

- Research hair-regrowth technology and restore hair to all members of the group.

Members

- Blofeld (Daniel Grazian):
- Dr. Evil (Shawn Westerdale):
- Luthor (Samantha Powers):

Residents of Sciencetown

“A neighborhood is where, when you go out of it, you get beat up.”

—Murray Kempton

Residents of Sciencetown

Members

- Dr. Clayton Forrester (Charles Hope): The Mayor of Sciencetown. His term expires today, and hopefully today's election will be less controversial than the one in which he was elected. Dr. Strangelove had been leading in preliminary polls, whereupon Forrester launched all of his supporters into space (specifically, to the Satellite of Love). The vote was a landslide.
- Dr. Horrible (Ben Kaduk): The Official Blogger of Sciencetown. He is the major news source of the town, writing and singing about whatever strikes his fancy, and (for some reason or another) he has quite a bit of sway over popular opinion.
- Lecter (Daniel Whalen): Sciencetown's staff psychiatrist. Has an impersonal and somewhat off-putting bedside manner but he seems to get the job done.
- Dr. Mario (Catherine Olsson): A doctor of biology specializing in viral pharmacology. He arrived in Sciencetown about a week ago, fleeing the spreading drone epidemic. Seems to have an unhealthy attachment to a woman named "Peach".
- Jekyll (Alex Kandell): A doctor of chemistry with some violent mood swings. He was extradited to Sciencetown by the British government several years back after one of his rages destroyed the Tower of London, and has subsequently claimed to have cured the condition that was causing the problems.
- Dexter (Nikolas Koutsopoulos): A young (and rather diminutive) man of German descent who showed up about a year ago after his sister destroyed his lab for the Nth time. He seems to be interested in acoustics.
- Dr. Doom (JB Parkes): The sovereign ruler and absolute dictator of Latveria, an Eastern European nation. . . up until a week ago when Latveria ceased to exist thanks to the drone epidemic. Since his arrival here he has developed signs of multiple personality disorder stemming from the loss of his homeland.
- Dr. Evil (Shawn Westerdale): The archnemesis of Austin Powers, he was sent to Sciencetown five years ago after his last scheme involving lasers backfired so badly that the British government was forced to take action. He has since turned inwards and focused more of his time and energy towards his cat, Mr. Bigglesworth.
- Blofeld (Daniel Grazian): The head of the now-defunct criminal organization SPECTRE, he is an arrogant genius who was exiled to Sciencetown by MI6 years ago. Ever since, he has become even more twisted and cold, and focuses on getting revenge on James Bond almost to the point of obsession.
- Egon Spengler (Mike Salvato): A former Ghostbuster from New York City, he arrived in Sciencetown a couple of years ago. Over the years, he became even more withdrawn and introverted than he had been in his Ghostbusting days, to the point where nowadays he is a walking bag of neuroses. Dr. Hannibal Lecter has been working with him for a while now, and thinks he is close to a breakthrough.
- Dr. Frankenstein (Paul Kominers): A doctor of medicine who has pioneered numerous advances in lightning-based revivification. Claims to have caused the drone epidemic as a prelude to taking over the world.
- Dr. Claw (Daniel Kane): Leader of the now-defunct MAD crime syndicate, and archnemesis of Inspector Gadget. It is said that no one has seen his face and lived to tell the tale, though it's unclear who would be telling those tales.
- Luthor (Samantha Powers): A cutthroat businessman and scientist, Luthor served as head of LexCorp in Metropolis. He arrived here several days ago when fleeing from the drone epidemic, and promptly paid Dr. Clayton Forrester one billion dollars for one quarter of Sciencetown (since renamed Luthorville).
- Bill Nye the Science Guy (Alexandra Westbrook): A longtime resident of Sciencetown who's been living in town since his show went off the air years ago. A great educator and musician.

- Dr. T (Greg Lohman): A large black man, formerly of the A-Team TV series. He left his acting career to enroll in a PhD program and received a Doctorate in Science, and since then has been living in Sciencetown and pitying fools.

The Sciencetown Fair

Today is the 36th Annual Sciencetown Fair, coinciding exactly with the yearly mayoral elections. The schedule of events for the day is as follows:

- T+1:15 – Storytime with Uncle Lecter
- T+2:15 – Debates and Mayoral Election
- T+3:15 – The Invention Exchange

The Sciencetown Code

To help prevent abuse by the often-megalomaniacal mayors of Sciencetown, the Sciencetown Code contains a mechanism whereby the citizens of Sciencetown may, if sufficiently concerned, make arbitrary changes to the law of the town. Any petition that includes signatures of 2/3 of Sciencetown's members will become binding law as of the next day.

Notable Provisions of the Sciencetown Code

Cats While many mad scientists are very fond of their cats, Sciencetown has long held that mad cats are a menace to the welfare of upstanding residents of Sciencetown. As a result, cats are permitted in Sciencetown, but only so long as any cat that is in a public location is physically in the possession of their owner at all times.

Residents of Sciencetown

“A neighborhood is where, when you go out of it, you get beat up.”

–Murray Kempton

Residents of Sciencetown

Members

- Dr. Clayton Forrester (Charles Hope): The Mayor of Sciencetown. His term expires today, and hopefully today's election will be less controversial than the one in which he was elected. Dr. Strangelove had been leading in preliminary polls, whereupon Forrester launched all of his supporters into space (specifically, to the Satellite of Love). The vote was a landslide.
- Dr. Horrible (Ben Kaduk): The Official Blogger of Sciencetown. He is the major news source of the town, writing and singing about whatever strikes his fancy, and (for some reason or another) he has quite a bit of sway over popular opinion.
- Lecter (Daniel Whalen): Sciencetown's staff psychiatrist. Has an impersonal and somewhat off-putting bedside manner but he seems to get the job done.
- Dr. Mario (Catherine Olsson): A doctor of biology specializing in viral pharmacology. He arrived in Sciencetown about a week ago, fleeing the spreading drone epidemic. Seems to have an unhealthy attachment to a woman named "Peach".
- Jekyll (Alex Kandell): A doctor of chemistry with some violent mood swings. He was extradited to Sciencetown by the British government several years back after one of his rages destroyed the Tower of London, and has subsequently claimed to have cured the condition that was causing the problems.
- Dexter (Nikolas Koutsopoulos): A young (and rather diminutive) man of German descent who showed up about a year ago after his sister destroyed his lab for the Nth time. He seems to be interested in acoustics.
- Dr. Doom (JB Parkes): The sovereign ruler and absolute dictator of Latveria, an Eastern European nation. . . up until a week ago when Latveria ceased to exist thanks to the drone epidemic. Since his arrival here he has developed signs of multiple personality disorder stemming from the loss of his homeland.
- Dr. Evil (Shawn Westerdale): The archnemesis of Austin Powers, he was sent to Sciencetown five years ago after his last scheme involving lasers backfired so badly that the British government was forced to take action. He has since turned inwards and focused more of his time and energy towards his cat, Mr. Bigglesworth.
- Blofeld (Daniel Grazian): The head of the now-defunct criminal organization SPECTRE, he is an arrogant genius who was exiled to Sciencetown by MI6 years ago. Ever since, he has become even more twisted and cold, and focuses on getting revenge on James Bond almost to the point of obsession.
- Egon Spengler (Mike Salvato): A former Ghostbuster from New York City, he arrived in Sciencetown a couple of years ago. Over the years, he became even more withdrawn and introverted than he had been in his Ghostbusting days, to the point where nowadays he is a walking bag of neuroses. Dr. Hannibal Lecter has been working with him for a while now, and thinks he is close to a breakthrough.
- Dr. Frankenstein (Paul Kominers): A doctor of medicine who has pioneered numerous advances in lightning-based revivification. Claims to have caused the drone epidemic as a prelude to taking over the world.
- Dr. Claw (Daniel Kane): Leader of the now-defunct MAD crime syndicate, and archnemesis of Inspector Gadget. It is said that no one has seen his face and lived to tell the tale, though it's unclear who would be telling those tales.
- Luthor (Samantha Powers): A cutthroat businessman and scientist, Luthor served as head of LexCorp in Metropolis. He arrived here several days ago when fleeing from the drone epidemic, and promptly paid Dr. Clayton Forrester one billion dollars for one quarter of Sciencetown (since renamed Luthorville).
- Bill Nye the Science Guy (Alexandra Westbrook): A longtime resident of Sciencetown who's been living in town since his show went off the air years ago. A great educator and musician.

- Dr. T (Greg Lohman): A large black man, formerly of the A-Team TV series. He left his acting career to enroll in a PhD program and received a Doctorate in Science, and since then has been living in Sciencetown and pitying fools.

The Sciencetown Fair

Today is the 36th Annual Sciencetown Fair, coinciding exactly with the yearly mayoral elections. The schedule of events for the day is as follows:

- T+1:15 – Storytime with Uncle Lecter
- T+2:15 – Debates and Mayoral Election
- T+3:15 – The Invention Exchange

The Sciencetown Code

To help prevent abuse by the often-megalomaniacal mayors of Sciencetown, the Sciencetown Code contains a mechanism whereby the citizens of Sciencetown may, if sufficiently concerned, make arbitrary changes to the law of the town. Any petition that includes signatures of 2/3 of Sciencetown's members will become binding law as of the next day.

Notable Provisions of the Sciencetown Code

Cats While many mad scientists are very fond of their cats, Sciencetown has long held that mad cats are a menace to the welfare of upstanding residents of Sciencetown. As a result, cats are permitted in Sciencetown, but only so long as any cat that is in a public location is physically in the possession of their owner at all times.

Residents of Sciencetown

“A neighborhood is where, when you go out of it, you get beat up.”

–Murray Kempton

Residents of Sciencetown

Members

- Dr. Clayton Forrester (Charles Hope): The Mayor of Sciencetown. His term expires today, and hopefully today's election will be less controversial than the one in which he was elected. Dr. Strangelove had been leading in preliminary polls, whereupon Forrester launched all of his supporters into space (specifically, to the Satellite of Love). The vote was a landslide.
- Dr. Horrible (Ben Kaduk): The Official Blogger of Sciencetown. He is the major news source of the town, writing and singing about whatever strikes his fancy, and (for some reason or another) he has quite a bit of sway over popular opinion.
- Lecter (Daniel Whalen): Sciencetown's staff psychiatrist. Has an impersonal and somewhat off-putting bedside manner but he seems to get the job done.
- Dr. Mario (Catherine Olsson): A doctor of biology specializing in viral pharmacology. He arrived in Sciencetown about a week ago, fleeing the spreading drone epidemic. Seems to have an unhealthy attachment to a woman named "Peach".
- Jekyll (Alex Kandell): A doctor of chemistry with some violent mood swings. He was extradited to Sciencetown by the British government several years back after one of his rages destroyed the Tower of London, and has subsequently claimed to have cured the condition that was causing the problems.
- Dexter (Nikolas Koutsopoulos): A young (and rather diminutive) man of German descent who showed up about a year ago after his sister destroyed his lab for the Nth time. He seems to be interested in acoustics.
- Dr. Doom (JB Parkes): The sovereign ruler and absolute dictator of Latveria, an Eastern European nation. . . up until a week ago when Latveria ceased to exist thanks to the drone epidemic. Since his arrival here he has developed signs of multiple personality disorder stemming from the loss of his homeland.
- Dr. Evil (Shawn Westerdale): The archnemesis of Austin Powers, he was sent to Sciencetown five years ago after his last scheme involving lasers backfired so badly that the British government was forced to take action. He has since turned inwards and focused more of his time and energy towards his cat, Mr. Bigglesworth.
- Blofeld (Daniel Grazian): The head of the now-defunct criminal organization SPECTRE, he is an arrogant genius who was exiled to Sciencetown by MI6 years ago. Ever since, he has become even more twisted and cold, and focuses on getting revenge on James Bond almost to the point of obsession.
- Egon Spengler (Mike Salvato): A former Ghostbuster from New York City, he arrived in Sciencetown a couple of years ago. Over the years, he became even more withdrawn and introverted than he had been in his Ghostbusting days, to the point where nowadays he is a walking bag of neuroses. Dr. Hannibal Lecter has been working with him for a while now, and thinks he is close to a breakthrough.
- Dr. Frankenstein (Paul Kominers): A doctor of medicine who has pioneered numerous advances in lightning-based revivification. Claims to have caused the drone epidemic as a prelude to taking over the world.
- Dr. Claw (Daniel Kane): Leader of the now-defunct MAD crime syndicate, and archnemesis of Inspector Gadget. It is said that no one has seen his face and lived to tell the tale, though it's unclear who would be telling those tales.
- Luthor (Samantha Powers): A cutthroat businessman and scientist, Luthor served as head of LexCorp in Metropolis. He arrived here several days ago when fleeing from the drone epidemic, and promptly paid Dr. Clayton Forrester one billion dollars for one quarter of Sciencetown (since renamed Luthorville).
- Bill Nye the Science Guy (Alexandra Westbrook): A longtime resident of Sciencetown who's been living in town since his show went off the air years ago. A great educator and musician.

- Dr. T (Greg Lohman): A large black man, formerly of the A-Team TV series. He left his acting career to enroll in a PhD program and received a Doctorate in Science, and since then has been living in Sciencetown and pitying fools.

The Sciencetown Fair

Today is the 36th Annual Sciencetown Fair, coinciding exactly with the yearly mayoral elections. The schedule of events for the day is as follows:

- T+1:15 – Storytime with Uncle Lecter
- T+2:15 – Debates and Mayoral Election
- T+3:15 – The Invention Exchange

The Sciencetown Code

To help prevent abuse by the often-megalomaniacal mayors of Sciencetown, the Sciencetown Code contains a mechanism whereby the citizens of Sciencetown may, if sufficiently concerned, make arbitrary changes to the law of the town. Any petition that includes signatures of 2/3 of Sciencetown's members will become binding law as of the next day.

Notable Provisions of the Sciencetown Code

Cats While many mad scientists are very fond of their cats, Sciencetown has long held that mad cats are a menace to the welfare of upstanding residents of Sciencetown. As a result, cats are permitted in Sciencetown, but only so long as any cat that is in a public location is physically in the possession of their owner at all times.