
The Invention Exchange

“This week’s invention exchange is going to blow your little mind, Warthog. It’s the culmination of my life’s work.”

– Dr. Clayton Forrester

This year, at the 36th Annual Sciencetown Fair, there will be several new events that are happening for the first time. One of these is the Invention Exchange.

The origins of the exchange come from Dr. Clayton Forrester’s tenure at the Gizmonic Institute. Instead of saying hello to a co-worker, one would exchange one’s latest invention with them, which was a much more productive way to do things. Many of the company’s most profitable inventions came from Invention Exchanges, in fact.

This year several competitors are going to display their best inventions at the Exchange. Each competitor will reveal their invention to the crowd, explaining its name and usage, and then providing a demonstration. The winner of the Exchange will be determined by crowd response to each invention.

The event itself is being run by Lecter, and is scheduled to run at T+3:15.
