

(continued from front flap)

... which strengthened their armor and weapons.

They have been sent to a place from which none have returned since the Change.

However, the mortals aren't the only ones whose lives were cast into darkness when the magic failed. The gods, like the inhabitants of Elador, are dying and they may have to depart forever...

Cover illustration based on photograph by Duncan Harris used under CC by 2.0

NaNoWriMo 2011

As he said his final words, he could not shake one thought from his mind:
would they have to destroy all of Elador in order to save it?

Four unlikely companions answer the call to journey to Mythra to seek the explanation to the Change.

Kardan Mnerie, an elven scout by profession and a mage by training, is finally setting out on the task his master has long prepared him for. Seth Reed is tired of playing wizard's tricks and wants to understand the event which robbed him of his powers. Quinn Lloyd seeks to end the chaos engulfing the human lands and to restore the balance of power. And while the dwarf Dagrinn Strongaxe has no love of magic, his people have also felt the loss of the enchanments ...

(continued on back flap)